Salem Library hosts Indoor Kitchen Gardens, presented by Kerrie Roach

(Salem, SC) Learn how to have your own indoor kitchen garden a great way to grow plants all year round! The program will held on be Tuesday November 7, at 2:30 p.m., at the Salem Library. This program will be presented by Kerri Roach, a Clemson Extension agent. Picture a traditional English 'kitchen garden' spreading wide from the back door, providing everything your family might need in fruit and vegetable supplies. While this is not quite the want of today's typical family, a kitchen garden re-defined can be a great asset. Join us as we navigate through some great options for small scale 'kitchen gardens' indoors and out including raised beds, trellis systems, container gardening and even vegetable propagation. We will discuss some unique planting ideas and some tricks and tips to save money along the way. Bring your ideas, questions and comments and join us for this fun interactive program.
